Resolutions made two reports. The ma-jority report contained an anti-pro-hibition plant. After a flerce srug-gle, during which many able speeches were made on both sides, the mi-nority report was adopted. This report is really anti-prohibition, but not so radical, and believes in the enforcement of the law but demands the enactment of such amendments, changes and modifications as will make changes and modifications as will make the law effective and useful for the pur-poses for which it was designed. The eighteenth plant reads:

It is a cardinal file in our system of gov-erament that the majority shall rule, it is equally fundamental that all just govern-ments derive shest powers from the people, and it is alike a fundamental rule that when any respectable number of the people dory respectable number of the people and that any great public question once assed upon be sguth considered in some sm, that justice, firmness, and ght requires that it be done, because it would work no injustice to any one was the mobile mind a difference cause it would work no injustice to any one. THE WAR IN EGYPT.

A Night Engagement at Kassas LOHDON, August 20. General Wolseley telegraphs from Ismailia at 1:30 o'clock this morning at follows:

"I have just received news from the front that General Graham was heavily attacked last evening by a large force of Egyptians. British cavalry from Mai, amen went to his assistance, and he has had a brilliant success, taking eleven guns. Only a few British soldlers were killed, but over 100 were wounded. I am just about to proceed to the front."

An Ismailia disputch of the 20th gives the following account of the fighting:

An Ismailia dispatch of the 22th gives the following account of the fighting:
When morning came great excitement prevailed in our camp at Kassassin in consequence of the Egyptinus showing themselves in considerable force in various directions. General Graham presently sent Major Hart, with an escort of mounted infantry under command of Lieutenact Pigott, to ascertain the strength and exact position of the enemy. the strength and exact position of the enemy, Major Hart proceeded in the direction of Tel-ci-Kebir, and had good for sire two miles when the enemy opened fire with two gums. Licotemant Pigoti dismounted his men and re-turned the fire briskly, his men holding their ground well for some firm, though eventually they wave obliced in setter upon our camp. they were obliged to retire upon our camp. At ten o'clock 4,000 Bedonius appeared on our right and front, extending two miles, but, on the guns opening fire on them, they retired. About three o'clock their infantry advanced in open order upon our left, bringing up several guns, which they placed at a short distances from each other, and presently showed sayeral pieces of artillery on our right. Our guns opened fire and our men turned out to take the attack. The fight now waxed warm, and during the whole afternoon the gallant little garrison made a good defense. Meanwhile the cavalry, which was five miles in our rear, had been twice signaled by General Graham to support him, and had advanced almost to our post on without encountering the enemy. By 7:30 p. m. the whole force, consisting of the First and Second Life Guards, the Horse Guards, the Seventh Dragoons, part of the Fourth Dragoons, and the Nineteenth Hussars, with four guns, set out to succor the troops at Kassassin. The march had to be made very cautiously. The moon was rising, and showed the little army of horsemen to strange advantage us they passed over the shining ground, the clanking of their swords swelling musically through the air. Stewart, who directed the course of the brigthe idea of outflanking the enemy and turning his position. -Colonel-Russell brought his men over four miles of heavy ground, so that by nine o'clock, when they allently halted on the stav-line, they found themselves so close to the Egyptisus that the shells went over their heads succession, landing nearly half a their rear. From the position the cavalry had now gained they could see the enemy close on the horizon in very large num-bers, whereupon Colonel Russell dismounted his cavalry and ordered them to open a sharp

The bravery of the cav-alry in thus grandly charging a blind position, the strength of which it was impossible to tell, rendered the enemy almost panio stricken They fell back rapidly, nor is this to be won-dered at when the race between the various regiments of English cavalry is considered, in which the Seventh Dragoon Guards exerted themselves beyond description to be first, ply-ing their sabers with considerable alsority. In this way our position at Kassassin was relieved. We now command the country lending to Telest-Kebir.

About ten o'clock the cavalry came in in high spirits over their brilliant achievement.

Many were missing in the darkness, but they will no doubt turn up in the morning.
